Santa....Be Prepared!

Let's be honest about it, boys just aren't easy to buy gifts for. Bless their hearts, they grow so fast, change so quickly, that you have to watch it or you'll be giving them wind-up trucks after they've graduated to chemistry sets or BB guns when a 22-rifle is the only thing. But there's one sure thing if you have in mind a Cub or a Scout your problem's licked. PRANGE'S Boy Scout Headquarters on the Third Floor has Appleton's most complete collection of everything that Scouts require and dozens of things they don't absolutely need but are just crazy about having. Everything from a comb case to a waterproof precision watch . . . all strictly official Boy Scout. And, of course, full Scout uniforms, for every age and rank, every size.

Frankly, we are proud of this well stocked Boy Scout department, proud to have been singled out by the splendid Boy Scout organization to represent them in Appleton. If there is a Boy Scout or Cub on your list this Christmas, come in and see Mr. Chesna (who knows all about Scouts and Scouting) and he will suggest a dozen fine and inexpensive gifts in a twinkling. Or, if you can't come in write to him, giving the approximate age and size of your Cub or Scout.

Prange's is prepared to make this Christmas the merriest of his young life, with the gifts he'd rather have than anything else in the world.

Considering Reapportionment

This is the year of the census and the Wisconsin constitution provides that, at the first legislative session after the taking of the U.S. census, the legislature shall "apportion and district anew the members of the Senate and Assembly, according to the number of inhabitants, excluding Indians not taxed, soldiers and officers of the United States Army and Navy."

In spite of that provision in the constitution it is unlikely that redistricting of the legislature will take place in 1961. One reason is that the exact census figures probably will not be known before early spring and other reasons are provided in the constitution itself. Those provisions in the constitution which may delay reapportionment provide that assembly districts must be bounded by county, precinct, town or ward lines. The constitution also provides that no assembly district shall be divided in the formation of a senate district. (Maps showing proposed redistricting

It is plain that the constitution which requires the districts to be divided on a population basis makes it quite difficult by requiring that senate districts include whole assembly districts. This problem becomes even more complicated in areas surrounding cities where the city must revise its ward lines with an eye out for changes in the assembly district boundaries. This is greatly complicated often by the fact that assembly lines must sometimes include some city wards and some suburban sub-

It is not, however, these technical requirements which are troubling the legislative council's reapportionment committee at this time. Before that committee is the age-old fight between two principal parties for advantage under reapportionment. For many years the Wisconsin legislature has been dominated by the rural areas. In recent years, however, the migration from the farms and the woodlands to the cities has changed the population map of the state. What was once a rural economy has now become an industrial economy with large concentrations of population in the southeastern part of the state. Thus the eastern and southeastern counties, comprising about one-third of the area, now have little more than two-thirds of the state senators. If the reapportionment is carried out this year on the population basis, the southeastern one-third of the state will have possibly 23 of the state's 33 senators. A similar change of course would come about in the distribution of state assemblymen.

This is the basis for the fight over reapportionment which has started before the legislative council's reapportionment committee and can be expected to go on more or less constantly over the next year or support Nixon.

Following the 1950 census, a similar fight went on in the legislature, was carried to the State Supreme Court and raged on until reapportionment took place in 1954. The fight then, as now, was over the loss of representation in the rural areas. The opponents of population reapportionment at that time fought for some sort of area representation to prevent the comparatively small area in eastern and southern Wisconsin from taking over complete control of the legislature. They became known as "Areacrats."

After 1950, the reapportionment fight entered the courts when numerous suits were started to compel the legislature to reapportion. It had failed to act as required by the constitution since 1920. However, the Supreme Court held that it was powerless to compel the legislature to perform its duty. The fight went on and in 1951 the legislature passed a reapportionment proposal which had been worked out by the legislative committee guided by the late Chief Justice Marvin Rosenberry of the State Supreme Court. However, the legislature in passing the proposal delayed its effective date until 1954. In the meantime, a referendum was to be held as to whether to abandon population representation and include the use of area as a factor in reapportionment. The proposal was defeated in November, 1952, by 753,000 to 689,000. But the opponents of population reapportionment were not satisfied and they were strong enough to bring about another referendum on a question worded differently. The second referendum was held in April, 1953, and it passed 433,000 to 406,000. The vote in the spring election was only a little more than half the vote cast in the previous November referendum and illustrates quite clearly that referendums may be won or lost by the wording of the question and by the timing of the election.

In this instance, the Areacrats again were denied their victory when the Supreme Court held that reapportionment on any basis other than population was unconstitutional. The court held further that since the legislature had adopted the Rosenberry act it should go into effect and that no attempt to undo it could be made until

We now are approaching the time set by the court to renew the battle on this question. Nothing has changed in the principle involved. However, the people of Wisconsin have had six years of experience under the reapportionment of 1954 and should have learned something. One of the changes that came to Wisconsin as a result of this reapportionment is the use of daylight saving time. That never had been possible under rural domination of the legislature and it is only one of many great improvements in government that have come through proper representation.

Businessmen are Optimistic Outside of Texas, however, the survey indicated that business was not "too despondent." One man said, and this is given as a typical statement, "After all, we survived 20 years of Roosevelt and Truman; and in fact there are some who say we survived 8 years of Eisenhower. So I imagine we will survive Jack Kennedy." A good many businessmen, however, are pointing out that the narrow margin of the Kennedy victory and the continuing conservative Congress will keep things in check. The attitude is "If Kennedy doesn't tone down his program, Congress will do it for him."

Most businessmen, however, believe there will be some inflation. Most say they expected inflation no matter who was elected President. In fact, they appear to accept inflation as a permanent fact of business life. As one of them put it: "The point is though, that you and I will suffer more as individuals than our companies will if we get a return to inflation."

Even so, only one businessman reported having based an important decision upon the result of the election. An officer of a large Cleveland mining and manufacturing company said that his management, partially in the belief that inflation would start spiraling again, has decided to accelerate its plans for plant expansion. This with a view of getting more plant for its dollars today than it might be able to get next year. And what do these businessmen think that Kennedy should do to counter the present slump in business? The survey indicates most think they will not need to do anything. Almost all businessmen interviewed said they expect the recession will have worked itself out by the middle of 1961 and no major spending program could be put into effect by then.

the depletion tax allowance was necessary to insure a continuing search for new oil wells, Kennedy replied that he was in favor of a study and would have one made

Hospital Ships and Propaganda

One of the unexplainable situations in various underdeveloped and poverty stricken areas of the world is that American aid, whether private or through our government, doesn't seem to do anything for the United States as far as building sound re-

A privately sponsored project, the hospital ship Hope, now is in Jakarta, Indonesia. Doctors in the city are impressed with the efficiency, medical processes and equipment. But, says one doctor, "perhaps we expected too much. Right now our hospitals are so crowded and our doctors are so overworked that it might have been more useful to have a permanent hospital

- like the Russians are building." The public is disappointed because only 56 patients will be accepted aboard the Hope during its month-long stay although there are 60 doctors on board and 258 beds. When the ship goes to the outer islands and sends medical teams ashore to train medical personnel and to treat patients, there may be more encouraging reports.

The highly publicized work of Dr. Tom Dooley in Laos meant nothing when a neutralist regime took over and hastily began making overtures to Moscow and Peiping. Humanely speaking, the work of these dedicated people stands by itself; they have saved lives and eased suffering; they are not supposed to get involved politically. But why can the message of hope for the relief of bodily pains be so easily dispersed by the Communist line? How do we repeatedly fail to get across the simple truth that men and women with deep human compassion and a spirit of sacrifice must represent a better government and way of life as

The value of seat belts in lessening injury and reducing the number of deaths caused by traffic accidents is no lange:

Such changes as might be wanted, it has reminded, can be achieved through the comparatively simple process of amendments if there is a demonstrated need for them and if there is any confidence in popular backing for them.

THE PROPOSALS

There will be differences on

The commission has suggested that the fundamental law be changed to permit a legislature at a single sitting, by a twothirds majority, to approve a constitutional amendment, while retaining as an alternative method the present rule for two successive legislative approvals. A subsequent popular vote of ratification would be required in both cases. One wonders what would be gained by the twothirds vote alternative. Is there any emergency clamoring for such swift action? Is there any hope, among realistic men, that ever be had?

Wisconsin has shown an innate conservatism when it comes to electoral rights. It has been skeptical of propositions to change electoral arrangements. as shown in the repeated rejection of amendments to remove the 2-term restriction upon sheriffs, and the general indifference toward longer terms for state officers.

College teachers for several generations have sent students out of their classrooms with short ballot reform speeches ringing in their ears. But the voter as a group likes the idea of electing officials who rule him - however minor their functions may appear to the pedagogues. It may be a good thing to elect a governor for four years rather than two, but it is going to take a long time to persuade the mass of the electorate.

Republicans are on the spot. They don't know whether to move left, right - or stick to the muddle-of-the-road.

Kennedy will trim the White House staff. There'll be one new job though: an assistant in charge of keeping an eye on the rest of the Kennedys. No wonder the election was so close. It was like having Harry Truman running on both tickets.

Nixon hopes Democrats won't open a spending spree in January. A nation already in hock from Christmas shopping couldn't stand the strain.

Kennedy is uncertain about Lyndon Johnson. He owes him a lot - and has never been in debt before.

The guy who asked of Nixon's picture, "Would you buy a used car from this man?" has a cut line for Kennedy's Palm Beach picture in sports shirt and convertible: "Would you trust this man with the keys to your sports car?"

Republican Leader Halleck vows he'll oppose "wild-eyed spending." When he voted the $80 billion Republican budget, Halleck just closed his eyes and winced.

Trouping Long, Tiring, Says Brian Donlevy

Stage, Movie Actor Lived in Sheboygan During His Boyhood

Trouping the "road" is a tiring business broken only by periodic multi-performance stands; in large cities as sort of oasis in a desert of one-night stands.

Brian Donlevy, preparing for Saturday's one-night stand of "The Andersonville Trial" at Appleton High School, wearily shook' his head and observed that the company's progression from Hollywood since the middle of September has been a "long time" and it won't end until the middle of June, right back where it Donlevy, a native of Portadown, County Armagh, Ireland, was brought to Sheboygan as a small boy. He finished high school in time to be aroused by Pancho! Villa's border excursions and he enlisted in the infantry.

His military service extended into World War I and he became 654 Total in a part of the fledgling Air Force. After the war, he was appointed to Annapolis but pacifistic reac Couples Loop tion affected the budget, counting out a Naval career for him and he turned toward the stage.

In 'What Price Glory?' Louis Wolheim helped him get a job supporting his famous Capt. Flagg role in Maxwell Anderson's "What Price Glory?" in 1924 and night at Lakeroad Lanes. Donlevy became a luminary in Women's honors went to Helen the American theater's Golden Age. The magnificent transcript of the Lincoln-Douglas debates, "The Rivalry", brought him back to his first love and he played Douglas to Raymond Massey's Lincoln on the West coast.

His Andersonville role also has a detached Southern flavor to it. He plays the Baltimore attorney who defended Andersonville's commandant. The two shows have made Donlevy something of a Civil War buff. The years have taken their toll of Donlevy as might be imagined. His swashbuckling days are over, but his skill is still consummate. Even in as secondary a role as Otis H. Baker. Donlevy dominates the stage when he must.

We have gone through the industrial revolution, the agricultural revolution, the expansion of territory from coast to coast, the explosion of population and the assimilation of some 50 races of mankind into one people. These changes have altered our people in the sense that their thinking does not have the same content as the founding fathers. The changes in our thinking are affected by our general lack of knowledge of British and American history and the forces which created this nation. These changes are a fact.

It is the tendency among this generation of conservatives that they can, in some manner, restore the thinking of the 19th century in this century. The danger that the founding fathers foresaw in the direct election of senators and the President was that the lowest intelligence becoming equal in political power to the highest intelligence would be most numerous and would therefore pre-

West discarded a diamond on the queen of spades, and South knew what he needed to know: West held the queen of trumps. It would seem that South was trying to discard dummy's last diamond on the queen of spades. It would be natural for West to think that South had the missing four of diamonds and that declarer would benefit from discarding a diamond from dummy.

Trumps Valuable If West had only worthless trumps he would ruff the queen of spades. He would expect dummy to over-ruff, of course, but West would be satisfied to prevent the diamond discard.

Why should West fail to ruff the queen of spades? Clearly because his trumps were valuable rather than worthless.

Having discovered the trump situation. South led the jack of clubs from his hand and let it ride for a finesse. The rest was easy. Construct Tissue Yule Wreaths

Although most homemakers would agree that holiday time is perhaps the busiest time of the year, they'd also have to agree that the holidays provide many opportunities for enjoyable "do-ityourself" projects.

This year for something just a bit different, try making your own Christmas wreath out of tissues. It's inexpensive, easy and bets of all, it's something the youngsters can help with.

Holiday Colors For extra fun, you may want to use the new holly green and red tissues, available in a gay

Christmas carton, Tissue colors alternate-green and red-as you pull the tissues from the package. Or, if you prefer, use the standard tissue colors of your choice. Only other materials you'll need are chicken wire, 18inches square, and a package of pipe cleaners.

Here's how to do it: Form the chicken wire into the shape of a wreath, with about a 6inch opening in the center. Next, Ground Was Broken Sunday for Zion Lutheran Church's $476,000 building make flowers. Take a tissue folded in half and cut along the crease. Mr. John J. Dixon, General Manager of WAPL enthusiastically expressed this statement: "We at WAPL want to thank the nearly 300 boys and girls who participated in our Safety Campaign Slogan Contest. We also are deeply grateful to the public-spirited sponsors whose daily safety messages were broadcast during this campaign. We feel that this is a public service which does tremendous good everywhere it is heard. And if, through this campaign, we were able to prevent one accident, or if we had a small part in the possible saving of one human life, our reward is the richest of all."

FIRST Among The Fine Cars of the World

Not sheer weight - steam rollers are heavy. Not tremendous horsepower ---- most buses are considerably less than 300 h.p. But a spectacular balance of suspension, performance and economy that does the job an automobile was meant to do. Namely, to transport you from one point to another as quickly, comfortably and economically as possible. On these three points (and what others count?), Mercedes-Benz can't be approached. Put together with painstaking craftsmanship that has no equal to form an entirely new concept in motoring and ownership pleasure. Come in and see the product of the oldest automobile manufacturer in the world: Mercedes-Benz.
